KNAAN SHABTAY

Swiss-born singer-songwriter, at home in indie folk, alternative and rock.

Knaan Shabtay is a Swiss-born singer-songwriter whose songs move between singer-songwriter, indie folk, alternative and rock.

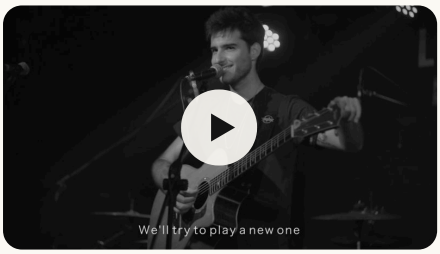

He moved to London to study music, and in 2014 he released his debut EP, Lost In Time. Its single, Stay A Little Longer, reached radio in Switzerland and beyond. After a UK tour he released the Far From Home EP in 2018, followed in 2019 by singles including You Won't Say It First and 1999, and the live EP A Night Full Of Stars (Live).

His first full album, Teaching Paper Birds To Fly, came out in January 2023. He is now working on a new album planned for 2027, and plays solo, as a duo or with a full band.

"Cascading, patterned acoustic guitar notes layer on top of each other to create an impressive waterfall of sound. The breathy, high-pitched vocals and electric guitar notes add to the beautiful maelstrom."

Stephen Carradini, Independent Clauses, 18 June 2016, on Sunrise. Read it

In 2016 Amir Ascher wrote about "Sunrise" on his Haaretz blog and described it as an emotional letter in a bottle.

"You Won't Say It First" was featured on Eco99's online playlist "החדשים והנכונים" in 2019.
